

Seeking new ground

with provocative, forward-thinking authors Lierre Keith & Curtis White

Friday, Nov. 20 Berkeley City College Auditorium, 2050 Center Street, Berkeley FREE & OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

5pm

Lierre Keith

farmer and ecology activist, author of "The Vegetarian Myth: Food, Justice, and Sustainability"

"Agriculture is a relentless assault against the planet....In service to annual grains, humans have devastated prairies and forests, driven countless species extinct, altered the climate, and destroyed the topsoil—the basis of life itself. If we are to save this planet, our food must be an act of profound and abiding repair: it must come from inside living communities, not be imposed across them." *

Sponsored by the Global Studies Program & the Humanities & Social Sciences Departments at Berkeley City College

7pm

Curtis White

novelist, essayist, author of "The Barbaric Heart: Faith, Money and the Crisis of Nature"

"The Barbaric Heart' argues that the present environmental crisis will not be resolved by the same forms of crony capitalism and managerial technocracy that created the crisis in the first place...the solution might very well come from an unexpected quarter: the arts, religion, and the realm of the moral imagination."*

Sponsored by KPFA & the English Department at Berkeley City College as a benefit for Milvia Street, the BCC literary magazine
